THE CATHOLIC SCHOOL.

The Catholic school has opened in Jefferson town and every morning thirty or forty children can be seen marching into the church, where prayers to God are offered. The sight is most inspiring indeed. A good lesson could be learned from it. If all schools were opened with prayer, or if our children were taught their dependence upon God as they are being educated, greater results would be shown in the finished product—the man or woman.

ARM BROKEN

Mrs. E. R. Cochran and Children, of Middle town, have narrow escape from Death in Louisville.

Mrs. E. R. Cochran, who resides 2 miles above Middle town on the Shelbyville pike, suffered a broken arm, and two small children who were with her had remarkable escapes from serious injury or death when a buggy, driven by John Kirchner, of Middle town, in which they were riding, in which they were riding at Frankfort avenue in Louisville Monday and overturned it. Later Kirchner and a companion, John Ratterman, aged twenty-one, were arrested by Corporal McNeely, of the Louisville police, and confined at Frankfort avenue and Peterson street, as they were returning to St. Matthews, on the charge of fast driving. When they were presented in Police Court the cases were continued.

The buggy was turned completely over and all the occupants were thrown on the ground with great force. Mrs. Cochran had a sixteen-months-old baby in her arms at the time of the accident, and it is said that the arm will always be weak as a result.

Mr. Cochran, who resides at a store on the corner, was a witness to the scene by the screams of his wife and the excitement, and he had to carry the baby to the residence of Dr. E. T. Grasser. There it was found that the point of the elbow bone had been broken, and it is said that the arm will always be weak as a result.

SIDEWALKS.

The Board of Trustees has this week sent notices to property owners to complete their sidewalks. We have extended the time twice and for the last time. According to several wireless messages received at headquarters, it is expected there are several hundred property owners who think that this is one grand bluff. If these people have not finished their sidewalks by Sept. 21, we will see that they are made in a hurry, and they will not save money by this. So get busy.

OLD NUMBER NINE

This evening and labors are ended; the works of the day Have faded from sight with the sun's longing; And the stars are farther than daylight away.

I turns the leaves of an album, which memory presents to me; I behold, and as in days of old, Old Number Nine I can see.

It's a school-house that's dearer to memory than any where school years I've spent; And the country road to my school is dearer than ever years, through Which the strength of my will can't resent.

She stands the lofty hill, which over looks the valley below; And the valley road to my school—my school—

With the field where the golden-rods grow.

Just a school-house, three stories high, three rooms to each side.

A shed at the rear, and the great poplars near.

Walls behind, in highways, we would hide.

And the little rope swings, as it downward swayed.

From the hill where it is fast.

The door at the front stands open, and into the school-room I look.

But OH! How startle, the first I see there, In with the old and the young, the little and the young.

My classmates are standing close by, each one of us strung on the line;

And the master says, "Sheel, Popocatepetl, As in old days at Old Number Nine."

Each desk holds the same dear school-mate, nothing new I discern.

As I look, it appears, I've retraced some past years.

To live over the days which I yearn.

I hastily glance over the school-room, a form of each humpy face.

Which engraved on the heart, can never depart.

The school-room walls shall erase!

In the course of my recollection, for the present, the album closes.

Naught comes to my sight but the dark corners of night.

Walls behind, in highways, we would hide.

For peaceful repose;

But, ere my head rests on my pillow, I must kneel at this bedside of mine;

Of the Father, request that his rich blessing.

On my school-mates at Old Number Nine.

From these school-mates yet gather at the musical note of the bell;

And some changes in time, in time's narrow space.

Are sad to reflect on and tell.

Some have left the old school and are teachers; while some pursue life in the city mad and some in their graves are at rest.

No more to roll on can answer, but deep the memories of happy days here.

While I and the school are yet remaining, in the schoolroom, a form of each humpy face.

Conspicuous and bright, through the mist of her night.

On a chesterfield for Number Nine.

FINE DAIRY STOCK.

HOLSTEIN-FRIESIAN at the Kentucky State Fair.

The Holstein-Friesian has long been known to Kentuckians as a great milk producer, but there has been no concerted action among the breeders of this dairy cow in the State to the fact that the dairy hospitals for the horses and the state feeble-minded Institute at Frankfort have decided to use this breed altogether in their dairies, requiring six or seven hundred cows, is a great stimulus to the breed in Kentucky.
